

MASAMBIRO UPDATE

Kunyanja Secondary School in Nkhata Bay, Malawi

Kunyanja School is thriving with 250 students making fantastic use of the wonderful facility created with support from so many people here. In January 2009 the science lab and library will open taking the education it provides to a new level.

But for now the message from the teachers and students is a huge thank you and appreciation that so many people in the UK have taken an interest in their future.

The Kunyanja Campus

Two blocks are 4 classrooms, offices and staffrooms; in the foreground are the science lab (left) and the library to be opened in January.

Studying hard – each classroom holds about 60 students

The school office

Now there are 250 students the admin is much more complex! The books bought with Masambiro support have made a massive difference to the school.

Having a drink

Bringing water from the town to the school has also brought water to local villagers.

Finishing touches

The science lab will be the first in the town, and will be the catalyst for bringing electricity to the school and with it to the local villages.

The Library

When open this will be the library an invaluable resource for students who have nowhere to study. It will also be available to the local community.

Football

They love football; Jafale in the background, head boy of Kunyanja played premiership football in Malawi but quit to complete his studies – he's a real inspiration,
